FROM OTTAWA

Bulletin Correspondence.

The climax of opposition obstruction was reached yesterday when the acting leader of the opposition, Mr. Monk, moved for the adjournment of the House at one o'clock. Monday was Labor Day, and, therefore, a public holiday, but on account of the press of business and the lateness of the session the government had decided to sit during that day, and, therefore, members of the House who were desirous of attending to business were unable to take advantage of the three days' holiday that otherwise would have occurred. When, however, the House assembled at eleven o'clock the tendency of the opposition to obstruct was shown so plainly that when Mr. Monk suggested an adjournment after one o'clock the premier thought it best to agree.

The forenoon was taken up in asking questions regarding the direct news service between England and Canada. The service is already in operation and is proving very satisfactory. The Canadian newspapers are getting the benefit of it without distinction of party and yet practically the whole forenoon was occupied in asking questions regarding it. Not opposing it, for the opposition would not dare to do that; but simply obstructing business, as is the privilege of members to do if they have so little regard for the dignity of parliament. Messrs. McCreary and Oliver protested against the adjournment, pointing out how unfair it was to members from the extreme east and west of the Dominion to delay business. While members from Ontario and Quebec could run home at any time to straighten up their affairs, those from the Maritime provinces and west of the lakes were unable to do so; and every adjournment and delay in the business of the House simply keeps them so much longer from their own business. This they did not object to if business was being done, but did object strongly to being prevented from either forwarding the business of the country or attending to their own business by the obstruction of the opposition and by frequent adjournments.

Bulletin Correspondence.

Yesterday was occupied in discussion of the redistribution bill and very good progress was made. The report of the Redistribution committee in regard to British Columbia and the North-West was adopted. In Manitoba, the counties of Provencher and Souris were agreed to. The Nova Scotia redistribution, by which the province loses two members, one in Pictou county and one in the Island of Cape Breton, was agreed to. Pictou is at present represented by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper and A. C. Bell.

The principal discussion took place on Ontario constituencies. The constituencies of Dufferin, Dundas, Durham, Glengarry, Grenville, Haldimand, Halton, Lincoln, Peel, Prescott, Prince Edward, Stormont, Wentworth, Lanark, Renfrew, Simcoe, were carried. Lennox and Addington, Grey, Kent, Lambton and Middlesex were subject of considerable discussion and an agreement was not reached regarding them. From present appearances it would seem that there is not that general obstruction to the redistribution bill that was at first expected. The decision to take county boundaries as the basis and have the matter discussed by a committee representing both sides of the House, shows its good result not only in an amicable agreement being arrived at in so many cases; but also by allowing both sides a say from the very start, it prevents the accusation of unfairness on the part of the majority, which otherwise would no doubt be held, instead of a map prepared entirely by government supporters in the interests of government supporters, being brought down and the government majority relied upon to vote it through, reason or no reason, as was the case with the redistribution act of 1881. The principle upon which the redistribution was to be made was first agreed to by the House after full discussion, and then a joint committee from both sides of the House appointed to give effect to the principle laid down. Of course, the government majority can only be expected to look out for the party interests, but at every stage of the game their attitude and action is open to the most public criticism by their opponents, and under the circumstances they cannot take any course for which they cannot give good reasons.

The dispute in regard to the arrangement of the boundaries of certain constituencies rests upon a supposition of adherence to previous political preferences on the part of the electors, which is not altogether to be relied on. The supposition is that a town or township which has given a majority to a certain party for several successive elections, can be depended upon to do so again. Hence the talk of adding this Conservative or Liberal township to this or that constituency, in the face of the fact that the province of Ontario for nearly thirty years has consistently given a Liberal majority in the local House while it has alternated between the Liberal and Conservative parties in the Dominion House. It is not altogether complimentary to the judgment of the electors that they should be considered not to have any choice in politics at an election; but are handed about as though their votes were so much personal property to be delivered on order. This idea has not come into play in the Territories or British Columbia for several reasons; and if it had been acted upon would have been found to have less than no foundation, for in the west people use their judgment as applied to the conditions existing from time to time.

CONSERVATIVES AND THE TARIFF

J. Israel Tarte, ex-minister of public works, has sought the Conservative fold. His tariff views conform with the ideas of the Conservative party in Canada, who wish to be given an opportunity to raise tariff rates. In a recent letter to the Mail and Empire, the leading Conservative paper in eastern Canada, Mr. Tarte, among other things, says:

"The majority of my recent colleagues did not want to revise (raise) the tariff. I had fully made up my mind that it was our duty to have a strong fiscal policy, a more pronounced protective tariff."

"What you may have thought and said to me, what I may have thought and said to you, is not of much consequence to the nation. The question is: What policy are we going to follow for the future? Those who are favorable to a policy of protection cannot have any more hopes in the present administration. They do not want to strengthen the tariff. Would they not lower it if they were successful at the polls in a few months?"

"Has not the time come for all those who believe in the adoption of a tariff of ample and effective protection to our industries, our agricultural interests, our laboring classes, to unite their efforts in view of securing the success of a policy that would be so manifestly advantageous to all classes of the Canadian people? What have old issues to do with the present situation? Do we, or do we not, require a tariff of self-defence, of protection of our national industries? That is the question. Let those who believe that such a tariff should be enacted and put in force agree, and meet on that common and honorable ground."

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT

Wetaskwin Times, Sept. 7th.

News was brought to town on Tuesday by J. Sherman Fox that Austin Bearisto was accidentally drowned in Dried Meat Lake. It seems that Austin had been employed by Iven Reid and left in a punt for his home across the lake. This was about three weeks ago, and as the neighbor had not seen him around (they supposed he had gone to town). His body was found floating in the lake on Sunday, hence the accident is an entire mystery.

The deceased was a nephew of Frank Bearisto of town, and was about twenty years of age. He was an energetic and popular young man, and his mysterious accident has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood. Austin took up a homestead at Dried Meat Lake over two and a half years ago, and since that time has been roughing it, hence his untimely death is all the sadder, as he was almost ready to get his patent. He was born on Bruce Island, and we understand the funeral took place at Dried Meat Lake on Thursday.

NAMING THE STREETS

Editor Bulletin:—Will you kindly allow me space in your daily to make a suggestion to the powers that be, before the naming and numbering of our streets take place. There are now a number of streets in both the east and west end named First, Second, Third, etc. Would it not be well to call those in the west end avenues, as First avenue, Second avenue, etc., and let those in the east end remain as they are? There need not be any tautology about it as the respective corners would be spoken of as the corner of Victoria and Second avenues, etc. It would save confusion and not add to the expense, as there are the same number of letters in street as in avenue.

Thanking you for the space allotted, I am yours truly,
